BACKGROUND

This action arose after Plaintiff purchased a pillow at Defendant's store in San Diego, California on July 19, 2015. (Second Amended Compl. ("SAC") ¶¶ 9, 29, ECF No. 25.) At the store, Plaintiff saw pricing information indicating that the pillow's "regular" price was $19.99, but was being offered at a "sale" price of $9.99. (Id.) Specifically, Mr. Azimpour examined the price sign bearing the original price and also examined the red sign, with black letters announcing, "Sale" and stating "Save $10." (Id.; see also id. Ex. B (a pricing sign that Azimpour describes as nearly identical to the price sign he observed when making his purchase).) The Sale Sign announced the discounted price of $9.99 and the regular price was described immediately next to it as, "reg. $19.99." (Id.) Plaintiff relied on this purported discounted price in making his purchase, (id.), and claims he would not have purchased the pillow but-for the misrepresented price, (id. ¶¶ 9, 29, 33). Additionally, upon check-out on July 19, 2015, Sears provided Plaintiff with a receipt containing the allegedly misrepresented price, specifically stating "SALE" in large, bold, all-caps lettering directly above the item he purchased. (Id. ¶ 31.) Plaintiff alleges that Defendant has employed a scheme to defraud consumers by advertising merchandise at fabricated "sale" prices. (See, e.g., id. ¶¶ 1, 2, 3, 4, 32.) Plaintiff now also alleges that his "counsel's investigation has revealed" that the pillow Plaintiff purchased remained continuously on "sale" at every Sears store in San Diego County for the same price from the filing of this suit through November 8, 2016. (Id. ¶ 11; see also id. ¶¶ 19–28 (detailing Plaintiff's counsel's "investigation").)

On January 15, 2016, Plaintiff filed his Amended Complaint ("FAC") seeking a class action against Defendant for false and misleading advertisements in connection with merchandise sold in its retail stores. (FAC ¶ 1, ECF No. 10.) The Court dismissed Plaintiff's FAC for failure to plead with particularity under Rule 9(b). (See First MTD Order, ECF No. 22.)

Plaintiff filed his SAC on November 8, 2016. Plaintiff brings the same six causes of action, including: (1) violation of Unfair Competition Law—unlawful acts ("UCL," Cal.

1 Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, et seq.) on behalf of the California Class; (2) violation of 2 UCL—unfair acts (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, et seq.) on behalf of the California Class;
3 (3) violation of the California False Advertising Law (“FAL,” Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code 4 § 17500, et seq.) on behalf of the California Class; (4) violation of the Consumers Legal 5 Remedies Act (“CLRA,” California Civil Code § 1750, et seq.) on behalf of the California 6 Class; (5) Unjust Enrichment on behalf of the California Class; and (6) violations of the 7 Consumer Protection Laws on behalf of Classes in states with similar laws. (See generally 8 SAC, ECF No. 25.)

9 Defendant now moves to dismiss or, in the alternative, strike Plaintiff’s SAC on 10 various grounds. (See generally MTD, ECF No. 26.) The Court considers each argument 11 in turn.

12 MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO RULE 12(b)(1)

13 I. Legal Standards

14 A. Rule 12(b)(1)

15 Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction, and as such have an obligation to 16 dismiss claims for which they lack subject-matter jurisdiction. Demarest v. United States, 17 718 F.2d 964, 965 (9th Cir. 1983). Because the issue of standing pertains to the subject-18 matter jurisdiction of a federal court, motions raising lack of standing are properly brought 19 under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1). White v. Lee, 227 F.3d 1214, 1242 (9th 20 Cir. 2000). The plaintiff bears the burden of establishing he has standing to bring the claims 21 asserted. Takhar v. Kessler, 76 F.3d 995, 1000 (9th Cir. 1996); see also In re Dynamic 22 Random Access Memory (DRAM) Antitrust Litig., 546 F.3d 981, 984 (9th Cir. 2008) (“The 23 party asserting jurisdiction bears the burden of establishing subject matter jurisdiction on 24 a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.”).

25 Rule 12(b)(1) motions may challenge jurisdiction facially or factually. Safe Air for 26 Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004). “In a facial attack, the challenger 27 asserts that the allegations contained in a complaint are insufficient on their face to invoke 28 federal jurisdiction. By contrast, in a factual attack, the challenger disputes the truth of the 1 allegations that, by themselves, would otherwise invoke federal jurisdiction.” Id. Here, 2 Defendant’s challenge is facial because it disputes whether Plaintiff’s alleged harm is 3 sufficiently particularized to confer Article III standing as well as statutory standing under 4 the UCL and FAL. Defendant does not rely upon extrinsic evidence, but instead relies only 5 on the pleadings. Accordingly, the Court will assume the truth of Plaintiff’s factual 6 allegations, and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of Plaintiff. Whisnant v. United 7 States, 400 F.3d 1177, 1179 (9th Cir. 2005); Safe Air for Everyone, 373 F.3d at 1039.

8 B. Article III Standing

9 Under Article III of the United States Constitution, a federal court may only 10 adjudicate an action if it constitutes a justiciable “case” or a “controversy” that has real 11 consequences for the parties. Raines v. Byrd, 521 U.S. 811, 818 (1997); Lujan v. Defenders 12 of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992). A threshold requirement for justiciability in federal 13 court is that the plaintiff have standing to assert the claims brought. Id.; see also 14 DaimlerChrysler Corp. v. Cuno, 547 U.S. 332, 342 (2006) (“Article III 15 standing . . . enforces the Constitution’s case-or-controversy requirement.”) (citations 16 omitted). As the sole<sup>1</sup> proposed class representative, Plaintiff has the burden of showing 17 that Article III standing exists in this case. Ellis v. Costco Wholesale Corp., 657 F.3d 970, 18 978 (9th Cir. 2011).

19 The essence of the standing inquiry is to determine whether the party seeking to 20 invoke the Court’s jurisdiction has “alleged such a personal stake in the outcome of the 21 controversy as to assure that concrete adverseness which sharpens the presentation of 22 issues upon which the court so largely depends.” Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 204 (1962).
23 Three elements form the core of the standing requirement:

24 First, the plaintiff must have suffered an “injury in fact”—an 25 invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) concrete and 26 particularized, and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or 27 hypothetical. Second, there must be a causal connection between

28 <sup>1</sup> In a class action, only one named plaintiff must meet the requirements of Article III standing. Bates v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007).

1 the injury and the conduct complained of—the injury has to be 2 fairly . . . traceable to the challenged action of the defendant, and 3 not . . . the result of the independent action of some third party 4 not before the court. Third, it must be likely, as opposed to 5 merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a 6 favorable decision.

7 Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560–61 (quotations, citations, and footnote omitted). This irreducible 8 constitutional minimum, often termed “Article III standing,” seeks to limit the reach of the 9 judiciary into matters properly reserved for other branches of government. See 10 DaimlerChrysler, 547 U.S. at 341; see also Valley Forge Christian Coll. v. Ams. United 11 for Separation of Church and State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464, 474 (1982). Although the Supreme 12 Court has noted that “the concept of ‘Art. III standing’ has not been defined with complete 13 consistency,” Valley Forge, 454 U.S. at 475, these three “bedrock” requirements of injury, 14 causation, and redressability are uniformly essential to federal court jurisdiction. Raines, 15 521 U.S. at 818–20; see also Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 164–66 (1997).

16 C. Statutory Standing Under the UCL and FAL

17 Standing under the UCL and FAL is further limited to any person “who has suffered 18 injury in fact and has lost money or property” as a result of unfair competition. Cal. Bus.
19 & Prof. Code §§ 17204, 17535; see also Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Court., 51 Cal. 4th 310, 20 321 (2011). To plead standing under the UCL, a party must “(1) establish a loss or 21 deprivation of money or property sufficient to qualify as injury in fact, i.e., economic 22 injury, and (2) show that that economic injury was the result of, i.e., caused by, the unfair 23 business practice or false advertising that is the gravamen of the claim.” Kwikset, 51 Cal.
24 4th at 322 (emphasis in original).

25 II. Analysis

26 The Court previously found that Plaintiff had, at minimum, “standing to sue for his 27 alleged injury based solely on the in-store advertisement he relied on in making his pillow 28 purchase.” (First MTD Order 8, ECF No. 22.) Because Plaintiff failed to plead his fraud claims with particularity, the Court declined “to rule on whether Plaintiff has standing to 1 sue on behalf of others who have similarly relied on misrepresented pricing information.”

2 (Id.) The Court finds that this time around Plaintiff has pled with sufficient particularity 3 his fraud claims under Rule 9(b) and thus now considers Defendant’s arguments regarding 4 standing.

5 Defendant argues that Plaintiff lacks standing for a variety of reasons, including that 6 he lacks standing to (1) represent individuals who relied on anything other than in-store 7 advertisements; (2) represent a class of individuals that purchased different products than 8 Plaintiff; (3) represent a class of individuals who purchased a product discounted from an 9 “original” price; and (4) obtain injunctive relief. (See generally MTD, ECF No. 26-1.) The 10 Court considers each argument in turn.

11 First, Defendant argues that Plaintiff does not have standing to raise claims arising 12 from anything other than the in-store advertising he alleges to have seen. (Id. at 12–13.)
13 Plaintiff argues that Defendant conflates the standing inquiry with considerations better 14 suited for class certification. (MTD Opp’n 14–18, ECF No. 27.) Additionally, Plaintiff has 15 removed online purchasers from the class definition, and thus limited the class to in-store 16 purchasers. (Id. at 17 (citing SAC ¶¶ 35–36, ECF No. 25).) In other words, Plaintiff’s class 17 is limited to those who “have been exposed to the same type of in-store, misleading 18 advertising as Plaintiff.” (Id.)

19 Given Plaintiff’s concessions, and because the Court has already held that Plaintiff 20 adequately alleged actual reliance based on the causal link between Defendant’s in-store 21 advertising and Plaintiff’s alleged economic injury, (see First MTD Order 7–8, ECF No.
22 22), the Court finds that Plaintiff has adequately pled standing to represent at least a class 23 of purchasers who relied on in-store advertisements in making their purchase.

24 But Defendant points out that while Plaintiff amended his SAC to exclude “all online 25 purchasers” from the class definition, (see SAC ¶ 38, ECF No. 25), he still seeks to 26 represent a class of individuals that may have relied on “online promotional materials, in-27 store displays, and print advertisements,” regardless of where they made their purchase, 28 (id. ¶ 3). The Court finds Plaintiff’s concession that his class is limited to those who “have

1 been exposed to the same type of in-store, misleading advertising as Plaintiff,” (MTD 2 Opp’n 17, ECF No. 27), all but eliminates that concern.

3       However, to the extent Plaintiff still seeks to incorporate other media platforms into 4 this case, the Court again finds that Plaintiff fails to adequately plead reliance on online or 5 print advertisements, among possible others, for standing purposes. The Court understands 6 that Plaintiff alleges he and other putative class members were exposed to a years-long 7 campaign that might otherwise lessen the significance of the advertisement form or 8 medium in the standing inquiry. (See id. at 16 n.3, ECF No. 27.) But Plaintiff’s allegations 9 of fraud stretch from 2015 through the present date, which is substantially less than the 10 long-term advertising campaign at issue in In re Tobacco II Cases, 46 Cal. 4th 298, 328 11 (2009). As one court has similarly found:

12
13               Plaintiffs point to In re Tobacco II Cases, 46 Cal. 4th 298, 306, 14 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 (2009), arguing that they are 15 not required to plead their exposure to the advertising campaign 16 with an “unrealistic degree of specificity.” Opp’n at 31.
17 However, that case was predicated on the plaintiffs’ exposure to 18 an “extensive and long-term advertising campaign.” Id. at 328, 19 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20. Plaintiffs cannot rely on 20 Tobacco II unless they have alleged an advertising campaign that 21 is similarly extensive and lengthy. See Mazza v. Am. Honda 22 Motor Co., 666 F.3d 581, 596 (9th Cir. 2012); Delacruz v.
23 Cytosport, No. C 11–3532 CW, 2012 WL 1215243, at *8 (N.D.
24 Cal. Apr.11, 2012). At best, Defendants’ marketing campaign 25 began in 2012, which is substantially less than the “long-term” 26 campaign at issue in Tobacco II that lasted at least seven years.
27 FAC ¶ 12; Tobacco II, 46 Cal. 4th at 306, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 28 207 P.3d 20.

25 Bronson v. Johnson & Johnson, Inc., No. C 12-04184 CRB, 2013 WL 1629191, at *3
26 (Breyer, J.) (N.D. Cal. Apr. 16, 2013); see also Branca v. Nordstrom, Inc. (“Branca I”), 27 No. 14CV2062-MMA JMA, 2015 WL 1841231, at *4 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2015) 28 (“However, to the extent Plaintiff’s claims arise from Nordstrom’s website or from the

1 Nordstrom Rack name itself, the Court finds Plaintiff has not sufficiently alleged economic 2 injury or actual reliance for the purpose of standing.”); Mazza v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 3 Inc., 666 F.3d 581, 596 (“In the absence of the kind of massive advertising campaign at 4 issue in Tobacco II, the relevant class must be defined in such a way as to include only 5 members who were exposed to advertising that is alleged to be materially misleading.”).

6 Second, Defendant argues that Plaintiff lacks standing to bring claims based on 7 products different from the pillow he purchased. (MTD 14–15, ECF No. 26-1.) The Court 8 disagrees. This case is not about a pillow—it is about a price tag. Plaintiff’s allegations are 9 based on Defendant’s allegedly deceptive pricing scheme which uniformly applies to and 10 affects all products. As one court recently explained in a similar scenario:

11 12 Here, Plaintiff does not allege that his claims depend on what 13 type of product a consumer purchased from Nordstrom Rack; it 14 is immaterial for the purposes of his claims whether one 15 purchased a pair of shoes versus a hat, so long as the item bore a 16 “Compare At” tag. His allegations do not relate to the exact 17 prices, percentages of savings listed on the tags, or specific 18 characteristics of the underlying products, which would vary by 19 product. Rather, his claims relate to the consistent format of the 20 tags, i.e., the juxtaposition of two prices, one higher than the 21 other, the term “Compare At” and a percentage, labeled “% 22 Savings.”

23 Branca v. Nordstrom, Inc. (“Branca II”), No. 14CV2062-MMA (JMA), 2015 WL 24 10436858, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2015); see also id. at *3–5 (recounting the different 25 approaches to this question among district courts). The Court finds the reasoning of the 26 Branca II Court persuasive and thus finds that Plaintiff has standing to sue on behalf of 27 purchasers of other Sears items bearing in-store price tags similar to those relied upon by 28 Plaintiff because he is challenging the pricing scheme, not the product. Accordingly, the Court DENIES this portion of Defendant’s MTD.

Third, Defendant argues that Plaintiff lacks standing to represent a class of individuals who purchased a product discounted from an “original” or “former” price

1 because he relied on a sale tag listing a “regular” price. (MTD 16, ECF No. 26-1.) 2 Specifically, Defendant argues that these words are not interchangeable because they have 3 different meanings under different state statutes. (Id.) But Defendant fails to cite a single 4 statute—much less a case—supporting its argument. Without more, the Court DENIES 5 Defendant’s motion to dismiss on this basis.

6 Fourth, Defendant argues that Plaintiff lacks standing to obtain injunctive relief. (Id.) 7 Plaintiff concedes that he is not pursuing injunctive relief and that this claim was inserted 8 due to a scrivener’s error. (MTD Opp’n 20, ECF No. 27.) Thus, the Court GRANTS this 9 portion of Defendant’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s claim for injunctive relief.<sup>2</sup>

10 MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO RULE 12(b)(6)

11 I. Legal Standards

12 A. Rule 12(b)(6)

13 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) permits a party to raise by motion the 14 defense that the complaint “fail[s] to state a claim upon which relief can be granted,” 15 generally referred to as a motion to dismiss. The Court evaluates whether a complaint states 16 a cognizable legal theory and sufficient facts in light of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 8(a), which requires a “short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is 18 entitled to relief.” Although Rule 8 “does not require ‘detailed factual allegations,’ . . . it 19 demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation.” 20 Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S.
21 544, 555 (2007)). In other words, “a plaintiff’s obligation to provide the ‘grounds’ of his 22 ‘entitle[ment] to relief’ requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic 23 recitation of a cause of action’s elements will not do.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (alteration 24 in original). “Nor does a complaint suffice if it tenders ‘naked assertion[s]’ devoid of
26

---

27 28 <sup>2</sup> While Defendant argues this language should be stricken, the Court will allow Plaintiff the opportunity to remove it himself in his amended pleading.

1 ‘further factual enhancement.’” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (alteration in original) (quoting 2 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557).

3 “To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, 4 accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Id. (quoting 5 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). A claim is facially plausible 6 when the facts pled “allow[] the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant 7 is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). That is not to 8 say that the claim must be probable, but there must be “more than a sheer possibility that a 9 defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). “[F]acts that are 10 ‘merely consistent with’ a defendant’s liability” fall short of a plausible entitlement to 11 relief. Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557). Further, the Court need not accept as true 12 “legal conclusions” contained in the complaint. Id. at 678–79 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 13 555). This review requires “context-specific” analysis involving the Court’s “judicial 14 experience and common sense.” Id. at 679. “[W]here the well-pleaded facts do not permit 15 the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged—16 but it has not ‘show[n]’—‘that the pleader is entitled to relief.’” Id. (quoting Fed. R. Civ.
17 P. 8(a)(2)). The Court will grant leave to amend unless it determines that no modified 18 contention “consistent with the challenged pleading . . . [will] cure the deficiency.” DeSoto 19 v. Yellow Freight Sys., Inc., 957 F.2d 655, 658 (9th Cir. 1992) (quoting Schriber Distrib.
20 Co. v. Serv-Well Furniture Co., 806 F.2d 1393, 1401 (9th Cir. 1986)).

21 B. Rule 9(b)

22 Additionally, claims that allege fraud must meet the heightened pleading standard 23 of Rule 9(b), which requires that “[i]n alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with 24 particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).
25 Allegations of fraud must be “specific enough to give defendants notice of the particular 26 misconduct which is alleged to constitute the fraud charged so that they can defend against 27 the charge and not just deny that they have done anything wrong.” Semegen v. Weidner, 28 780 F.2d 727, 731 (9th Cir. 1985); see also Cooper v. Pickett, 137 F.3d 616, 627 (9th Cir.

1997) (noting that particularity requires plaintiff to allege the “who, what, when, where, and how” of the alleged fraudulent conduct). Additionally, where a plaintiff alleges “a unified course of fraudulent conduct and rel[ies] entirely on that course of conduct as the basis of a claim[,] . . . the claim is said to be ‘grounded in fraud’ or to ‘sound in fraud,’ and the pleading of that claim as a whole must satisfy the particularity requirement of Rule 9(b).” Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 1097, 1103–04 (9th Cir. 2003) (citations omitted).

C. California’s FAL, UCL, and CLRA

California’s FAL provides:

No price shall be advertised as a former price of any advertised thing, unless the alleged former price was the prevailing market price as above defined within three months next immediately preceding the publication of the advertisement or unless the date when the alleged former price did prevail is clearly, exactly and conspicuously stated in the advertisement.

Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17501. “This statute makes it unlawful for a business to disseminate any statement ‘which is untrue or misleading, and which is known, or which by the exercise of reasonable care should be known, to be untrue or misleading . . . .’” Arevalo v. Bank of Am. Corp., 850 F. Supp. 2d 1008, 1023–24 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (internal citation omitted). “The statute has been interpreted broadly to encompass not only advertising which is false, but also advertising which, although true, is either actually misleading or which has a capacity, likelihood or tendency to deceive or confuse the public. . . . Consequently, even a perfectly true statement couched in such a manner that it is likely to mislead or deceive the consumer, such as by failure to disclose other relevant information, is actionable under this section.” Davis v. HSBC Bank Nev., N.A., 691 F.3d 1152, 1162 (9th Cir. 2012) (citations, quotations, and alterations omitted).

California’s UCL prohibits “any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice and unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising.” Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. The UCL provides a separate theory of liability under the “unlawful,” “unfair,”

1 or “fraudulent” prong. Stanwood v. Mary Kay, Inc., 941 F. Supp. 2d 1212, 1222 (C.D. Cal.
2 2012) (citing Lozano v. AT & T Wireless Servs., Inc., 504 F.3d 718, 731 (9th Cir. 2007)).
3 “The UCL expressly incorporates the FAL’s prohibition on unfair advertising as one form 4 of unfair competition.” Hinojos, 718 F.3d at 1103. Thus, any violation of the FAL also 5 violates the UCL. Williams v. Gerber Prods. Co., 552 F.3d 934, 938 (9th Cir. 2008) (citing 6 Kasky v. Nike, Inc., 27 Cal. 4th 939, 950 (2002)).

7 California’s CLRA prohibits “unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive 8 acts or practices.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1770. Among other things, the CLRA prohibits 9 “[a]dvertising goods or services with intent not to sell them as advertised” and “[m]aking 10 false or misleading statements of fact concerning reasons for, existence of, or amounts of 11 price reductions.” Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1770(a)(9), (13).

12 D. The Reasonable Consumer Test

13 “To state a claim under the FAL, UCL, or the CLRA, the plaintiff must allege the 14 defendant’s purported misrepresentations are likely to deceive a reasonable consumer.”
15 Branca I, 2015 WL 1841231, at *6 (citing Williams, 552 F.3d at 938); see also Reid v.
16 Johnson & Johnson, 780 F.3d 952, 958 (9th Cir. 2015) (“It is true that violations of the 17 UCL, FAL, and CLRA are evaluated from the vantage point of a ‘reasonable consumer.’”).
18 “A reasonable consumer is ‘the ordinary consumer acting reasonably under the 19 circumstances.’” Davis, 691 F.3d at 1161–62 (quoting Colgan v. Leatherman Tool Grp., 20 Inc., 135 Cal. App. 4th 663, 682 (2006)). “Likely to deceive implies more than a mere 21 possibility that the advertisement might conceivably be misunderstood by some few 22 consumers viewing it in an unreasonable manner. Rather the phrase indicates that the ad is 23 such that it is probable that a significant portion of the general consuming public or of 24 targeted consumers, acting reasonably in the circumstances, could be misle[d.]” In re Sony 25 Gaming Networks and Customer Data Sec. Breach Litig., 903 F. Supp. 2d 942, 967 (S.D.
26 Cal. 2012) (quoting Lavie v. Procter & Gamble Co., 105 Cal. App. 4th 496, 508 (2003)).
27 “In determining whether a statement is misleading under the statute, the primary evidence 28 in a false advertising case is the advertising itself.” Bruton v. Gerber Prods. Co., 961 F.

1 Supp. 2d 1062, 1092 n.20 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (internal quotations omitted).

2 Finally, courts have recognized that “whether a business practice is deceptive will 3 usually be a question of fact not appropriate for decision on [a motion to dismiss].” Davis, 4 691 F.3d at 1162 (brackets in original).

5 II. Analysis

6 Defendant argues that Plaintiff fails to (1) allege facts sufficient to state a UCL claim 7 based on unlawful conduct; (2) state a claim for restitution, disgorgement, or (3) unjust 8 enrichment; (4) demonstrate that he can maintain a nationwide class; and (5) comply with 9 the mandatory CLRA notice requirements, (see MTD 17–29, ECF No. 26-1). The Court 10 considers each argument in turn.

11 A. Sufficiency of Allegations

12 Defendant argues that Plaintiff fails to allege sufficient facts to state a UCL claim 13 based on unlawful conduct for two reasons: (1) Plaintiff alleges the pillow he bought had 14 a “regular” price listed along a “sale” price, not a “former” price as required by the UCL; 15 and (2) Plaintiff’s allegations based on his counsel’s “investigation” are insufficient to 16 demonstrate that the pillow purchased by Plaintiff was never offered at the full retail price 17 in the ninety days preceding his purchase. (Id. 17–18.)

18 First, Defendant argues that the violations that form the basis for Plaintiff’s 19 “unlawful” UCL claim—violations of the FTCA and California’s “former price 20 advertisement” statute—are grounded in the theory that Sears’ “discounted” prices were 21 false or misleading, but that Plaintiff does not allege facts demonstrating violations of these 22 laws. (Id. at 17.) Specifically, Defendant cites California’s “former price advertisement” 23 statute, which provides, in pertinent part, that “no price shall be advertised as a former 24 price of any advertised thing, unless the alleged former price was the prevailing market 25 price as above defined with three months next immediately preceding the publication of 26 the advertisement . . . .” (Id. (citing Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17501 (2015) (emphasis 27 added by Defendant)).) However, Defendant argues that Plaintiff alleges the pillow he 28 bought had the “regular” price listed alongside a “sale” price. (Id. (citing SAC ¶¶ 9, 29,

1 ECF No. 25).) Thus, Defendant concludes that Plaintiff’s claim must fail because he did 2 not allege he was shown a “former” price, or any language that might indicate a former 3 price comparison (e.g., “formerly,” “was,” “previously,” etc.).

4 This argument is unpersuasive. Not only does Defendant fail to cite a single case—5 or other authority—in support of its argument, it more importantly fails to address other 6 authority rejecting this very argument, which the Court finds persuasive. See, e.g., Knapp
7 v. Art.com, Inc., No. 16-CV-00768-WHO, 2016 WL 3268995, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 15, 8 2016) (rejecting a similar argument and finding that “[v]iewed in the light most favorable 9 to the nonmoving party, these allegations are sufficient to plausibly establish that Knapp 10 interpreted the ‘40% off’ language as advertising a discount from Art.com’s former prices.
11 Indeed, it is not clear how else Knapp could have reasonably understood the ‘40% 12 language’ other than as advertising a discount from Art.com’s former prices”).
13 Accordingly, Defendant has failed to meet its burden and the Court DENIES this portion 14 of Defendant’s MTD.

15 Defendant’s second argument also fails. As an initial matter, Defendant argues that 16 the Court should discount Plaintiff’s counsel’s investigation because it may be a potential 17 violation of the rules of professional ethics. (MTD Reply 7, ECF No. 28 (citing Rael v.
18 N.Y. & Co., Inc. (“Rael I”), No. 16-CV-369-BAS(JMA), 2016 WL 7655247 (S.D. Cal.
19 Dec. 28, 2016)).) In Rael I, the Court faced a similar investigation brought by the same 20 counsel in the present case. See Rael I, 2016 WL 7655247, at *7. The Rael I Court found 21 the investigation itself “disturbing,” id., and cautioned counsel “to consider the 22 Professional Ethical rule that prohibits an attorney from being a witness in his own case,” 23 id. at n.2 (citing Cal. Rule of Prof. Conduct 5-210).

28 ///

1 While Plaintiff's counsel's testimony, based on his investigation, might help 2 establish the allegedly unlawful marketing practices at Sears, there is no indication that his 3 counsel seeks to serve as a fact witness in this case.<sup>3</sup> Rather, at this early stage, this 4 investigation appears to serve only as a potential key to open the doors of discovery. The 5 discovery revealed, then, rather than his counsel, would likely serve as the evidence 6 confirming or denying the allegedly deceptive marketing ploys at Sears. The Court finds 7 that, so limited, Plaintiff counsel's "investigation," (see SAC ¶¶ 19–28, ECF No. 25), can 8 be properly used to supplement the allegations of Plaintiff's SAC.

9 And so it does. Plaintiff's counsel monitored Sears retail stores for months before 10 Plaintiff purchased his pillow. (Id. ¶ 20.) Among other things, the investigation revealed 11 that several items (including Plaintiff's pillow) were purportedly on "sale" for at least three 12 months—and sometimes beyond that—preceding Plaintiff's pillow purchase. (Id. ¶ 22 13 (collecting evidence).) And Plaintiff's pillow remains on "sale" to this day at the identical 14 regular-and-sale price that Plaintiff paid on July 19, 2015. (Id. ¶ 25.) Thus, this 15 investigation answers the questions posed to this same counsel by other courts. See, e.g., 16 Rael v. Dooney & Bourke, Inc. ("Rael II"), No. 16CV0371 JM (DHB), 2016 WL 3952219, 17 at *3 (S.D. Cal. July 22, 2016) ("Moreover, even assuming Mr. Carpenter's submission is 18 competent and relevant, Mr. Carpenter does not in any way specify the details of his 19 investigation. Did he visit any D&B retail or outlet stores? Did he visit the D&B website, 20 and if so, on which dates? Which products, if any, are discounted beyond the 90-day 21 period? Did he attempt to search for the handbag purchased by Plaintiff to determine if its 22 pricing was false and if so, on what basis? As pointed out by Defendants, Plaintiff does not 23 even identify which specific D&B purse she purchased."); Rael I, 2016 WL 7655247, at 24 * 7 ("Even if the Court takes into account the new facts presented by Mr. Carpenter, his

26
27 <sup>3</sup> However, to the extent Plaintiff's counsel does seek to serve as a fact witness in this case, the Rael I 28 Court's warning is well taken. Additionally, because the issue of the impropriety of the investigation is not presently before the Court, the Court makes no determination of whether the investigation is itself unlawful—under either the California Rules of Professional Conduct or any other law.

1 declaration does not specify a single detail of his alleged investigation. The declaration is 2 simply a restatement of the conclusory allegations that Plaintiff states in her SAC.”). This 3 investigation and the accompanying allegations, of course, do not prove that these items 4 were never offered at the “original” or “regular” price during the relevant period. But they 5 do plausibly suggest that they were not. This is sufficient under Rule 9(b). See Rubenstein 6 v. The Neiman Marcus Group, LLC, No. 15-55890, 2017 WL 1381147, at *2 (9th Cir. Apr.
7 18, 2017). Accordingly, the Court DENIES this portion of Defendant’s MTD.

8 B. Restitution and Disgorgement

9 Defendant argues that Plaintiff is not entitled to a disgorgement remedy as a matter 10 of law under the UCL. (MTD 18, ECF No. 26-1 (citing Kraus v. Trinity Mgmt. Servs. Inc., 11 23 Cal. 4th 116, 129 (2000) (noting that “restitution is the only monetary remedy expressly 12 authorized by . . . [the UCL]”)).) Defendant also argues that Plaintiff is not entitled to 13 restitution because Plaintiff cannot show he gave Sears more than the value of what he 14 received in return. Id.

15 The Court disagrees. While Defendant is right that Kraus, 23 Cal. 4th at 129, states 16 that “restitution to a person in interest is the only monetary remedy for violation of the 17 UCL,” Defendant fails to cite any authority demonstrating that the cost-minus-value 18 method is the only measure used to calculate restitution.<sup>4</sup>

19 Indeed, another court recently considered and rejected Defendant’s argument, noting 20 that

21 [none of Defendant’s cited] cases . . . articulate an exclusive 22 measure of restitution; they merely reiterate the unremarkable 23 proposition that restitution requires the plaintiff to account both

---

25 <sup>4</sup> Defendant’s reliance on Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Prods. Co., 23 Cal. 4th 163 (2000), is 26 misplaced. While the court generally defined restitution as “the return of the excess of what the plaintiff 27 gave the defendant over the value of what the plaintiff received,” Cortez, 23 Cal. 4th at 174, the court also 28 noted that Section 17203 authorizes the court to fashion remedies to prevent, deter, and compensate for unfair business practices, including a broad discretion to issue “orders or judgments . . . as may be necessary to restore to any person . . . any money or property” acquired by means prohibited under California’s consumer protection laws. Id. (citing Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203).

1 for what she gave up and any benefits she received. A plaintiff 2 may account for benefits received in a variety of ways beyond 3 the cost minus value measure. See Pulaski, 2015 WL 5515617;
4 In re Tobacco Cases II, 2015 WL 5673070. In other words, 5 plaintiffs may pursue alternative measures of restitution as long 6 as the recovery sought represents a measurable amount supported 7 by the evidence. Colgan, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 61 (“From the 8 authorities we conclude that restitution under the statutes 9 involved here must be of a measurable amount to restore to the 10 plaintiff what has been acquired by violations of the statutes, and 11 that measurable amount must be supported by evidence.”).

12 Russell v. Kohl’s Dep’t Stores, Inc., No. EDCV151143RGKSPX, 2015 WL 12781206, at 13 *4 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 6, 2015); see also id. at *3–5 (assessing in depth whether and concluding 14 in the affirmative that alternative measures of restitution may be permissible); Stathakos v.
15 Columbia Sportswear Co., No. 15-CV-04543-YGR, 2016 WL 1730001, at *4 (N.D. Cal.
16 May 2, 2016) (finding same).

17 Thus, at this juncture, all that remains is whether Plaintiff has pled sufficient facts to 18 support a cognizable legal theory for recovery under the UCL; whether Plaintiff can submit 19 sufficient evidence of a measureable amount of restitution is a premature determination at 20 the pleading stage. Here, Plaintiff alleges that he “would not have purchased the 21 merchandise without the misrepresentations made by Sears.” (SAC ¶ 30, ECF No. 25.) 22 Thus he requests “damages, restitution, and other appropriate relief in the amount by which 23 Defendant was unjustly enriched as a result of its sales of merchandise offered at a false 24 discount.” (Id. ¶ 5.) This is sufficient to state a claim for restitution under the UCL. See 25 Russell, 2015 WL 12781206, at *5 (finding same based on a similar measure of restitution); 26 see also Pulaski & Middleman, LLC v. Google, Inc., 802 F.3d 979, 989 (9th Cir. 2015) 27 (measuring restitution as “what a purchaser would have paid at the time of purchase had 28 the purchaser received all the information”). Accordingly, the Court DENIES this portion of Defendant’s MTD.

1           C. Unjust Enrichment

2           Defendant argues that the Court should dismiss Plaintiff's claim for unjust 3 enrichment because California does not recognize an independent cause of action for unjust 4 enrichment. (MTD 19, ECF No. 26-1.) Plaintiff responds that the Ninth Circuit has 5 construed the common law to allow an unjust enrichment cause of action through quasi-6 contract, and that Plaintiff's allegations meet that standard. (MTD Opp'n 28, ECF No. 27.) 7 In response, Defendant argues that Plaintiff "has not asserted a quasi-contract claim" and 8 thus this cause of action should be dismissed. (MTD Reply 9, ECF No. 28.)

9           As an initial matter, Defendant is right that in California there is no standalone cause 10 of action for "unjust enrichment." See Astiana v. Hain Celestial Grp., Inc., 783 F.3d 753, 11 762 (9th Cir. 2015) (citing, e.g., Durell v. Sharp Healthcare, 183 Cal. App. 4th 1350 12 (2010)). But Plaintiff is also right that "when a plaintiff alleges unjust enrichment, a court 13 may 'construe the cause of action as a quasi-contract claim seeking restitution.'" Id. (citing 14 Rutherford Holdings, LLC v. Plaza Del Rey, 223 Cal. App. 4th 221 (2014)). While Plaintiff 15 has not styled his cause of action as unjust enrichment under a quasi-contract theory, he 16 has alleged that (a) Defendant deceptively priced and advertised merchandise, (b) Plaintiff 17 and putative class members paid for merchandise they would not have paid for but for 18 Defendant's deceptive pricing and advertising, and (c) Defendant was unjustly enriched in 19 retaining the revenues from these purchases because it sold products that were not of the 20 quality, nature, fitness, or value that had been represented by Defendant. (SAC ¶¶ 80–83, 21 ECF No. 25.) The Court thus construes this cause of action as a quasi-contract claim 22 seeking restitution. See, e.g., Astiana, 783 F.3d at 762 ("Astiana alleged in her First 23 Amended Complaint that she was entitled to relief under a 'quasi-contract' cause of action 24 because Hain had 'entic[ed]' plaintiffs to purchase their products through 'false and 25 misleading' labeling, and that Hain was 'unjustly enriched' as a result. This straightforward 26 statement is sufficient to state a quasi-contract cause of action."); (see also MTD Opp'n 27 28–29, ECF No. 27 (collecting cases finding same)). Accordingly, the Court DENIES this 28 portion of Defendant's MTD.

1           D. Nationwide Class Allegations

2           Defendant moves to dismiss or strike Plaintiff's sixth cause of action on behalf of a 3 nationwide class. Specifically, Defendant argues that Plaintiff cannot maintain such a class 4 because (1) applying California law to a nationwide class would violate due process, and 5 (2) California law may not be applied to class members from states whose consumer 6 protection laws differ materially from California's. (MTD 19, ECF No. 26-1.) Plaintiff 7 responds that his SAC plainly states that each of the California claims (UCL, FAL, and 8 CLRA) are only brought on behalf of a California class, (see SAC First Cause of Action–
9 Fifth Cause of Action, ECF No. 25), and that he will instead seek to certify multistate class 10 claims, rather than a nationwide class, (see id. Sixth Cause of Action (listing states with 11 purportedly similar consumer protection laws)). (MTD Opp'n 30, ECF No. 27.)

12           Regardless of the nomenclature, the Court finds that Plaintiff lacks constitutional 13 standing to represent a class of consumers under these various state statutes.<sup>5</sup> As this Court 14 recently explained:

15
16           The overwhelming majority of courts have held that Article III 17 standing for state law claims is necessarily lacking when no 18 plaintiff is alleged to have purchased a product within the 19 relevant state. E.g., In re Capacitors Antitrust Litig.
20 ("Capacitors"), 154 F. Supp. 3d 918, 926 (N.D. Cal. 2015) 21 (noting "the strong trend in this district and in other courts is to 22 require an in-state purchase to establish Article III standing for 23 state antitrust and related consumer protection claims like the 24 ones alleged in this case" and collecting cases). This is because 25 injury in fact is not established. Id. Indeed, the Supreme Court 26 has explicitly defined "injury in fact" as "an invasion of a legally

---

25 <sup>5</sup> While Defendant does not specifically argue this point, the Court has an inherent obligation to determine 26 whether it has subject matter jurisdiction over an action, which unquestionably includes whether a plaintiff 27 has Article III standing to bring particular claims before a federal court. This applies even in the context 28 of putative class claims. See, e.g., Easter v. Am. W. Fin., 381 F.3d 948, 962 (9th Cir. 2004) ("The district court correctly addressed the issue of standing before it addressed the issue of class certification" (quoting Ortiz v. Fibreboard Corp., 527 U.S. 815, 831 (1999), for the proposition that a "court must be sure of its own jurisdiction before getting to the merits"))).

1        protected interest” that is “not conjectural or hypothetical.” 2        Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560, 112 S. Ct. 2130 (emphasis added). In the 3        absence of a named Plaintiff who has purchased a product within 4        the relevant state—even if there are sufficient allegations of 5        injury under other States’ or federal law—there can be no 6        determination that an interest was harmed that was legally 7        protected under the relevant state’s laws. Further, to merely posit 8        that putative class members suffered a particular injury that no 9        member currently before the Court even allegedly suffered is the 10       very definition of conjecture.

11       In re Packaged Seafood Prod. Antitrust Litig., __ F. Supp. 3d __, No. 15-MD-2670 JLS 12       (MDD), 2017 WL 1010329, at *36 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 14, 2017) (emphases in original).

13       Here, there are no named plaintiffs from the various state statutes listed in Plaintiff’s 14       sixth cause of action, much less named plaintiffs who reside in those states and actually 15       purchased a product from Sears in reliance on its allegedly deceptive sales tactics. Rather, 16       Plaintiff Azimpour, the only named Plaintiff, “resides in San Diego County, California.” 17       (SAC ¶ 9, ECF No. 25.) Thus, while Plaintiff has standing to represent a class of 18       Californians under California consumer protection laws, (see id. ¶ 88(c)), Plaintiff’s sixth 19       cause of action is otherwise DISMISSED for lack of constitutional standing. See also Rael
20       I, 2016 WL 7655247, at * 4 (finding same based on similar claims); Rael II, 2016 WL 21       3952219, at *5 (same).

22       E. Compliance with CLRA Notice Requirements

23       Finally, Defendant argues that Plaintiff failed to comply with the mandatory CLRA 24       notice requirements. (MTD 27–28, ECF No. 26-1.) Specifically, Defendant argues that 25       Plaintiff’s letter merely makes general, unfounded allegations and fails to identify the acts, 26       goods, or services at issue. (Id. at 28–29.)

27       “The CLRA’s notice requirement is not jurisdictional, but compliance with this 28       requirement is necessary to state a claim.” Cattie v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 504 F. Supp.
29       2d 939, 949 (S.D. Cal. 2007). Specifically, the CLRA requires the consumer to notify the 30       defendant of “the particular alleged violations” and demand that they be corrected. Cal.

1 Civ. Code § 1782(a). “Under the CLRA, a plaintiff must provide notice that he is 2 anticipating a suit for damages 30 days before filing such suit.” In re Mattel, Inc., 588 F.
3 Supp. 2d 1111, 1119–20 (C.D. Cal. 2008) (citing Cal. Civ. Code § 1782(a)). “A plaintiff 4 may alternatively file suit for injunctive relief without notice, give notice of intent to amend 5 the claims to add a claim for damages, and amend thirty days after the notice.” Id. (citing 6 Cal. Civ. Code § 1782(d)).

7 Here, Plaintiff sent his pre-suit CLRA letter on December 10, 2015, (Carpenter Decl.
8 Ex. 3 (“CLRA letter”), ECF No. 27-1), and filed his original Complaint on December 11, 9 2015, seeking only injunctive relief under the CLRA, (see ECF No. 1, Fifth Cause of 10 Action). The CLRA letter asserts specific violations under three subsections of the CLRA, 11 describes Defendant’s allegedly unlawful “sale” pricing scheme that deceives consumers 12 into purchasing items based on the false belief they are receiving a bargain, and demands 13 that Defendant remedy its unlawful behavior. (See CLRA letter.) This is sufficient notice
14 under the CLRA. See, e.g., In re Easysaver Rewards Litig., 737 F. Supp. 2d 1159, 1179 15 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (“The first page of the letter explains in plain language the conduct that 16 Plaintiffs allege violates the statute. The second page lists five sub-sections of the CLRA, 17 and asks for specific corrections and remedies. The content of the letter suffices to put 18 Provide on notice of the alleged CLRA violations.”); Stickrath v. Globalstar, Inc., 527 F.
19 Supp. 2d 992, 1002 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (finding same based on similar CLRA notice letter).
20 Accordingly, the Court DENIES this portion of Defendant’s MTD.
